EDUCATION SCHEME.

The scheme was worked out at the beginning of the year, but it was not put into effect until the autumn. The scheme was lated to the duration of the war, and was designed to meet the needs of the men who had been engaged in the army for some time. It was intended to provide a course of instruction for all ranks, from the lowest to the highest, and to give the men an opportunity of acquiring knowledge in various subjects.

The scheme was divided into three parts:

1. Instruction in the English language.
2. Instruction in mathematics and science.
3. Instruction in practical subjects, such as agriculture, engineering, and mechanics.

In addition, there were courses in music, art, and literature, which were open to all ranks.

The scheme was under the direction of a board of examiners, who were responsible for the quality of the instruction given.
