

Learning Resources for Teachers:

Learning Resource: William Rainsford

The Jiere on elong It of the Enemy . soon began to take .
The fiere outstuger and effect on our line, when orders were received to retire, This by the day Were michalically and considering the porterious humbins of the Enemy against that Very this the portures rumbers of the Zueury against that very sun
I. If the Tenerty from the every land of grounds it loss July a wanderful page in Butent Litory of the Gallantey.
July a wanderful page in court wary, I want of the British, to the Line Reached the High Ground, to the.
Pagte of Looge Chateres, it Looked as if the whole of the noted to the state of the state of the west Butist troops were retiring, as for as the Eye Could be were Lospis frilling Back on to your. Leavy. Lowityes were moving west at the tist, aumunition to and other waggins Bloked the Route wand, in the midst of the fours of traffic, and along Both Time of the Roads arrows Juido, Ditches, Crowds of Homested Come Limping along as fast as they tould go, all.
WSRO Acc 15444

Clue 6 - Diary entry 4 Fall back to Ypres (around 29th October 1914)

"The fierce onslaught (attack) of the enemy soon began to take effect on our line and orders were received to retire (retreat). This movement was done very methodically, and considering the enormous numbers of the enemy advancing against that very thin line of (British soldiers) who fiercely contested to every yard of ground. It was truly a wonderful page in British history of the gallantry (bravery) of the British, as the line reached the high ground. To the right of Stooge Chateau, it looked as if the whole of the British troops were retiring. As far as the eye could see were troops falling back on to Ypres. Heavy Howitzers (artillery guns) were moving west...and the wagon's blocked the road in the midst of the...traffic, and along both lines of the roads across fields, and ditches, crowds of wounded came limping along as fast as they could go."