TANK FOR WORTHING!
An Acknowledgment of Its Patriotic Assistance.

An announcement of special interest was made at the meeting of the Town Council yesterday afternoon, when a letter was read from the National War Savings Committee stating that the Army Council had generously placed at their disposal a limited number of tanks for presentation to towns of over 10,000 population whose record in financing the War reached such a standard of patriotic achievement as entitled them to enjoy this distinction.

The letter, which was addressed to Mr. Francis W. Mitchell, Honorary Secretary to the local Central Committee for War Savings, added the pleasing information that the National Committee were enabled to offer Worthing a tank, which would not only permanently commemorate the notable achievement of its citizens in financing the War, but would also bear lasting testimony to the important part played by the Worthing War Savings Committee in the country’s War effort.

The Mayor reminded the Council that the town was also to receive a machine gun from the War Office.

WORTHING AND ITS TANK

An Interesting Souvenir.

Its Part in the Great Battle of Cambray.

In acknowledgment of its service to national finance, for it has raised more than two million pounds towards successive War Loans, Worthing has been presented by the National War Savings Committee with one of the tanks actually employed in the Great War and its formal reception yesterday provided an interesting public ceremony.

Plaques were displayed in the neighborhood of the Town Hall, and the tank was placed near the Fountain. The Steyne School Cadets attended, under the command of Councillor Captain W. H. Bennett and Lieutenant C. Kenway, and the children of the several Elementary Schools having been released an hour before the time appointed for the ceremony, the older scholars, many of whom belong to the War Savings Associations at the Schools, came to the spot to witness the proceedings. A crowd of several thousand townpeople assembled at the scene.

The Mayor and Mayoress (the former wearing his chain of office) stood on the roof of the tank, accompanied by Captain W. F. Farrer, M.C., and several other officers in uniform, Mr. G. Stacey (Chairman of the War Savings Committee), and Mr. Francis W. Mitchell (the Honorary Secretary).

Several of the members of the Town Council and some of the Corporation officials also attended.

An All-British Production.

Mr. Mitchell formally introduced Captain Farrer to the assembly, and the latter, in asking the town to accept the tank, made an extremely interesting speech, first striking a personal note by saying that he held very dear associations and memories of the town of Worthing, having been a schoolboy there something like eight years ago. The tank before them, he declared, stood as an everlasting emblem of British ingenuity, British resourcefulness, and British pluck (applause). The tank was primarily a life saver, and in going into action in front of the infantry it saved a good many thousands of lives (hear, hear). It saved in other ways, for 500 of them were used at Cambrai, and an official of the War Office calculated that the saving in the preparatory barrage which would otherwise have been necessary would more than keep the whole Tank Corps for two years (applause). The colours of the tank before them were brown, red, and green, and the proverb they got in France was this: Through mud and blood to the green fields of Peace (loud applause). The speaker concluded with some apt words to the children before him.

The Mayor, in formally accepting the tank on behalf of the town, mentioned, amid loud applause, that Worthing had raised £2,522,750 towards the War Loans; and in certain cases their investments were made by local residents in London, he thought it might be said that Worthing contributed something like two and a half million pounds to Government securities (runaway applause).

A verse of the National Anthem having been sung, Councillor F. A. Watts called for three cheers for Captain Farrer, which were heartily given.

A Task for the Mayoress.

The Mayoress bestowed the name of "Farrer" upon the tank, in honour of the eloquent young Captain; some liquid contained in a champagne bottle being broken upon it by one of the officers in attendance.

The tank, preceded by the Steyne School Cadets, was removed to its appointed place in Railway-approach early in the afternoon, its progress through the streets being watched by a large assembly.

The crowd of four was in attendance.
