Worthing Women on the Home Front

WHATEVER THE JOB, the women have tackled it. Hardly a branch of Home Front life that has not been taken over by them. They've punched bus tickets, shifted luggage, grown food, made guns—in fact, they've done wonders. Not the least important is the job the ordinary housewife has done in wrestling with the food problem. And, of course, they have all registered for pretty well everything the ingenious authorities could conceive. And still they smile
